TWO DAY COURSES

IN-HOUSE SEMINARS with ROBERT C. WORTHINGTON, LLB

The Law of Construction Contracting

Construction Contracting is a difficult, time-consuming and legally risky business. The laws of contract, competitive bidding, agency, negligence, engineering and architecture, all intersect to create a web of potential pitfalls and liabilities for the unwary. Industry and professional practice add to the confusion. But, with knowledge and awareness, an Owner can administer a well-done, on-time, on-budget project. The Law of Construction Contracting is a two-day intensive legal education seminar designed for the supply management professional who needs to understand the complex elements of contracting for construction, where the risks are and how to resolve them. We explore the laws and practices of Construction Contracting, focusing on the obligations and liabilities of the three major parties in the construction contract matrix – the Owner, the Architect-Engineer and the Contractor – and explore the numerous legal risks involved in construction projects.

COURSE CONTENT

- participant's rights and responsibilities in law and in practice;
- how to avoid unnecessary legal risks by contracting more effectively;
- how to reduce costs in Construction Contracting;
- why design-build and partnering in construction hold both promise and additional risk for all participants; and much more.

GET THE LATEST DEVELOPMENTS

- Discover new legal decisions on bidding and tendering;
- Manage the legal risks of Major Works Construction;
- Learn the true extent of Engineering and Architectural liabilities;
- Avoid the three most common claims against the Owner;
- Understand the liabilities and obligations of the Owner; and much more.
